Why to do warm-up

Warming up is the first step to starting a workout and it's extremely important to do. The warm-up is done in order to warm-up a large volume of muscles in the human body. When a muscle is well warmed up it is much better prepared for a heavy load and you can save your body from unwanted injuries that can affect your progress in a skill and the process of learning a new skill.

How to warm-up for planche

The method I use and feel most prepared after it is a warm-up from upper to lower part of the body. The most important parts to warm-up are : neck, shoulders, elbows, wrists and waist. I can recommend the warm-up to be more intense so that the right level of body heat can be reached. Regardless of your level after warm-up, do not start with the most difficult part of your workout, but on the contrary, start your workout with the easiest part.

STRETCHING

DOES STRETCHING HELP MY WORKOUT?

Stretching is an extremely effective method of flexing your muscles and tendons. When a muscle is much more elastic, it is much harder to be injured. I combine my warm-up with stretching to make my workout for planche as effective as possible and also to be safe. I recommend not to miss the stretching before training for planche.

HOW AND WHEN TO DO STRETCHING?

I recommend stretching before and after training. A little stretching with lower intensity before workout and more stretchind with higher intensity after workout. The best method of stretching is to use resistance bands. As the use of resistance bands is aimed at certain parts of the body such as : shoulders, elbows, biceps. I recommend using lighter resistance bands before training. Resistance bands are used only before training. Post-workout stretching is done without resistance bands only with body movements with a little more intensity

PLANCHE FORM

With hollow back

Without hollow back

What is planche form?

One of the most often asked questions about the planche is "What my form should be?"

The most common forms of planche are either with or without hollow back. About the experience I have gained in this sport I can say that there is no perfect form and it's matter of preference. So try both forms and choose the form that you like to use for the future.

PLANCHE GRIP

Does the grip matter for the planche?

As well as the form I don't think that there is something like a perfect grip. The grip is something that everyone should choose for themselves.

FOR ME PLANCHE GRIP MIDDLE IS THE MOST COMFORTABLE.

PLANCHE HOLD + RESISTANCE BANDS

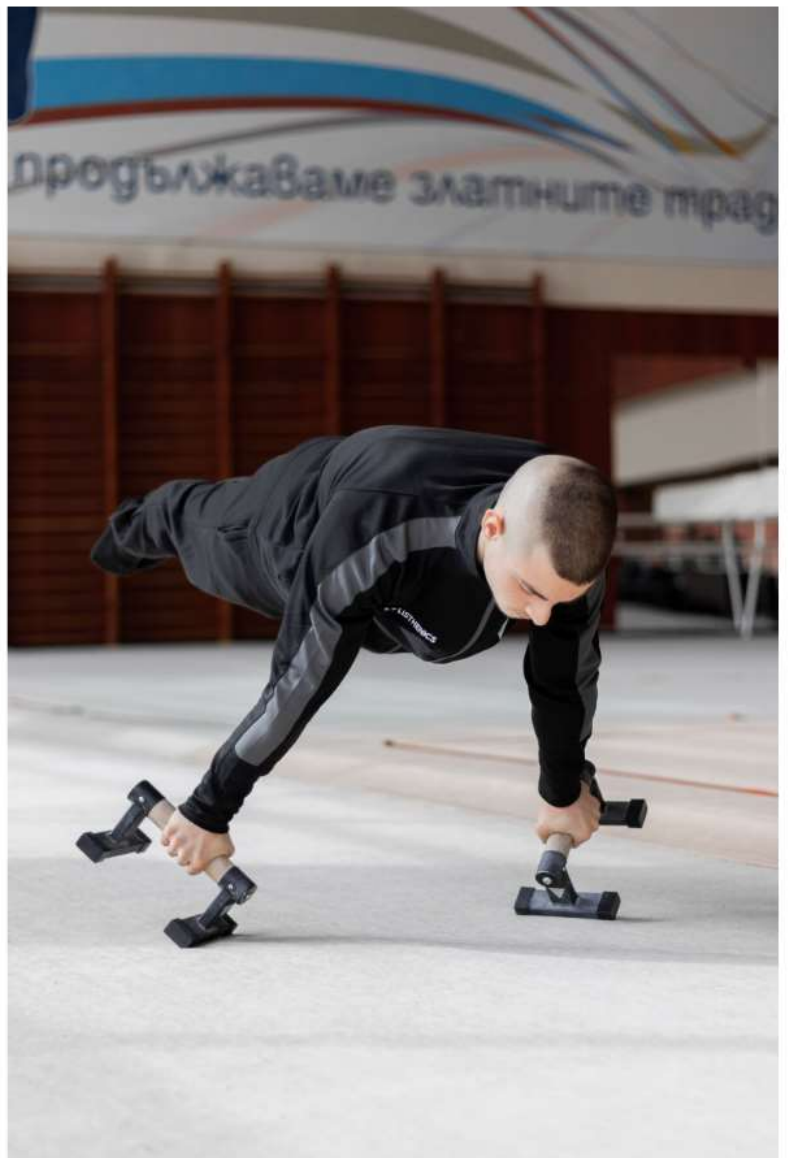

How long the minimum hold must be?

The minimum hold of one element must be 3 seconds. One of the most important things to perform a correct hold is to keep the body in perfect horizontal line and to be neither above or below that line

One of the most common methods of learning planche is to train it with resistance bands. There are a few types of resistance bands. In the beginning you should use stronger resistance band (with higher tension). After some time and progress the resistance band must be replaced with a weaker one (with lower tension)

Training volume

I recommend that the training process of planche to be 5 times a week. The rest between the attempts should be from 2 to 3 minutes depending on how you feel your body. Every training day can be with a different training volume, depends on how you're feeling.
